

Link your company to a popular and highly visible community event, and have some fun in the bargain. You can sponsor the whole festival or one of the teams.

A well-stacked row of firewood is a pleasing sight and, to its owner, a source of quiet pride. But the award-winning creative wood-stacking event at The Railway Station takes firewood piling to a whole new level.

In September and October 2017, the area around the Barry's Bay Railway Station will become an outdoor gallery of woodpile art.

Teams will display their creativity and stacking skill for all to see in the centre of Barry's Bay. The firewood sculptures will be created on Saturday, September 16, 2017 and will remain on display for four weeks, until October 14.

There's Art in Your Woodpile is back for a third year after proving very popular among visitors to Barry's Bay and The Railway Station. In its first year, it was awarded Event of the Year by the Ottawa Valley Tourist Association. Visitors to the festival will vote for their favourite firewood sculpture and the team that builds the most popular sculpture will be awarded a $500 prize.

For the first time this year, wood products companies and food vendors are invited to join in to make the event a celebration of the forest, the workers and companies that produce wood products in our area.
